Bio

My name is Jack Jordan, and my wife Dianna and I are the owners of Alpacas of Somerset Farm.

In 1978 we moved from southern California to the Sierra Nevada foothills. When thoughts of retirement began, we searched for a business that would allow us to stay home and enjoy the country lifestyle, utilize the tax advantages that come along with owning acreage in an agricultural area, and provide an income. Because of our love of animals, raising alpacas completely fit the bill. In March 2005, we established Alpacas of Somerset Farm with the purchase of our first foundation female. Our herd has since expanded to include 14 alpacas, two livestock guard dog's, and a llama.

Presently, I am a teacher for the El Dorado Union High School District, and an Assistant Professor of Statistics for Chapman University. My educational background includes an MBA degree, as well as various courses and workshops related to education. In addition to math and industrial education courses, I have taught business management and accounting classes. Prior to entering the teaching profession, I had careers in the manufacturing industry, as well as in technical and management consulting.

I am the current Calpaca Treasurer, and would like to serve another term on the Board of Directors. During my first term, I began the process of converting the accounting system to QuickBooks, a professional accounting program. Additionally, I have consolidated the various individual event bank accounts into Calpaca bank accounts which will allow better monitoring.

I appreciate your consideration for reelection to the Calpaca board and pledge to continue serving the organization to the best of my ability.
